

Maximise the Value of Your Planning Function

Why is this the right module for you?

This is ideal for organisations who simply feel that their planning processes are not working well enough for them or have limited existing planning functions.

Perhaps you are creating resource plans that are getting no traction with your stakeholders and drive limited actions or decisions.

You may simply not trust the outputs from the planning processes and the expectations they create.

It may feel as though the key components of planning are in place but are disparate and disjointed and create multiple versions of the truth.

Are you swimming in data but drowning because of no insight?

You may feel that your planning does not adequately reflect your organisation – its strategy, its change programmes, its cost challenges, its customer and people aspirations?

You may simply feel under-prepared for what's ahead

What does the module cover?

This module will review the appropriateness, relevance and quality of existing planning cycle:

- Stakeholder input, engagement and influence
- Quality of planning insight to support consistent understanding and confident decision making for both the short and long term
- Levels of preparedness for the future using planning insight
- How planning enables the business to respond quickly and effectively to changing dynamics
- How planning is supporting employee engagement with flexible and easy to use planning processes
- The effectiveness of planning in supporting learning and improvement of future planning and delivery

What opportunities will this present?

Be prepared for what's ahead, leave few surprises and even then, have a solution to hand.

Drive the required actions or decisions to make your business successful.

Know that stakeholders trust the outputs from the planning processes and the expectations they create.

Make data valuable through delivering insight that others understand and use.

Limit the data you have and use the saved time to drive better insight and actions.

Have your planning reflect your organisation – its strategy, its change programmes, its cost challenges, its customer and people aspirations, be the “go to” for decision making.
